SAVING ONE LIFE AT A TIME... May 22, 2006

Getting behind the wheel... even after one cocktail... is never a good idea.

That's why one company is using the "Drunk Driving Simulator"... to stop people from drinking and driving.

Students in Rosholt took it out for a spin...

And learned first-hand what will happen if they decide to try drinking and driving.

"Educating anyone of how alcohol can affect reaction times, motor skills... more importantly... we're showing them the hidden dangers like tunnel vision and becoming one track minded."

This is how it works...

Level one starts you off sober.

But once you're on the road, levels begin to change and it's meant to make the driver feel drunk.

Students say it was a real eye opener.
